Bora Research - Weekly Market Review (8-Dec-23)

WEEKLY MARKET HEADLINES

- Fixed Income Market: Cumulative bond trading from January to November declined to GH¢81bn; This is in comparison to GH¢218bn over the same period in 2022. Bond trading volumes reached GH¢12.78bn for November, reflecting a 32.16% month-on month increase. However, this figure reflects a noteworthy 62.69% decrease compared to volume traded during the same period in the previous year. (GFIM)
- Equity trading on local bourse records over 1,010% month-on-month increase in volume; This is the highest since March this year, and after two (2) consecutive month-on-month decline. Localisation of MTNGH shares contributed to over 90% of the trade registered. On a year-on-year comparison, this underscores the heightened participation of investors in the equities market. (BoraResearch)
- Share price of Benso Oil Palm Plantation Ltd (BOPP) trading at a new all-time high of GH¢20.00; The share price of the palm oil and palm kernel oil production and processing company, began the year at GH¢7.65 and has since gained 161%. BOPP shares have recorded 900% increase over a three year period and is currently selling at a price-to-earnings ratio of 4.8. (BoraResearch)
